

With the opening of the Queensferry Crossing as a motorway, the Forth Road Bridge is now a Public Transport Corridor, which continues to be the route for walking and cycling across the Firth of Forth.

The bridges and surrounding road network have been designed to cater for all travel modes by making the most appropriate use of existing and new infrastructure.

! There is no pedestrian or cyclist access to the Queensferry Crossing.

With general traffic removed from the Forth Road Bridge, the experience for pedestrians and cyclists is greatly improved and provides the opportunity to build in physical activity as an everyday trip.

New sections of footpaths, cycleways and safe crossing points have also been introduced as part of the changes to the road network.

PTC Bus journey times should be shorter and more reliable due to the dedicated public transport corridor which allows buses, taxis and motorcycles up to 125cc to cross the Forth Road Bridge.

P&R Park and Ride facilities are available at Ferrytoll and Halbeath in Fife.

🚶 There is access to the rail network with a number of stations in the area (Dalmeny, Inverkeithing and North Queensferry).

Find out more about local park and ride facilities and bus services by contacting your transport provider (details overleaf).

The Forth Road Bridge closes to pedestrians and cyclists when wind speeds reach 50mph. If in doubt, contact Bridge Control on 0131 319 3083 for advice before starting your journey or check www.theforthbridges.org for restrictions.

 Further details on the use of the Queensferry Crossing and Forth Road Bridge is available in the Users' Guide: www.theforthbridges.org/plan-your-journey/road-user-guide
